

One of my kids recently sent me a video with the caption:
“Mom: You’ll have free time when you grow up.
Me as an adult:”

The video cut to a disgruntled voice saying, “You lied to us.”

I responded like any wise mama would:
“I hope I never told you that, because it is SUCH a lie. BUT we do make time for what’s important to us—and sometimes that’s still hard to do.”

The exact same day, I received a text from a friend that said, “You should try for a trail walk today!”

My first thought was immediate: I just don’t have any time. I have too much to do today.

My second thought? : You make time for what’s important to you. And sometimes that’s still hard to do.

So I decided that fresh air, movement, and connecting with God’s creation among the trees wasn’t going to be hard that day. I knew colder temperatures were coming, and I also know I’m a much better human after spending time outdoors with God.

John Wesley understood this idea of making time for what matters when he said, “I have so much to do that I spend several hours in prayer before I am able to do it.”

Each of us gets the opportunity to set and manage our own priorities. When we allow the world or others to dictate how we spend our time, we can begin to feel disconnected from God, disconnected from loved ones, stressed, and maybe even a little empty.

I invite you to check in with yourself, with God, and with how it is with your soul.

Ask yourself:

- What spiritual practices, relationships, appointments, or activities need your attention next?
- What do you need to make time for so your soul can feel refreshed?

Maybe this is a weekly check in.

Maybe it needs to be a daily check in.

Hourly is perfectly acceptable too.

Sometimes your answer will feel easy to do.

Other times it’ll feel hard. But take a breath and remember, we can do all things through Christ who gives us strength. (Philippians 4:13).

See you in worship!

Pastor Becky

COMING SOON! A New Bible Study!! "Come to the Waters" led by MaryKay Hymes beginning February 19, 2026 from 9-1030 am..

Water plays a central role in the stories of scripture, from the chaotic waters of creation to the River of Life in Revelation where chaos is no more. We will be studying some of the Bible's 800+ references to water and the lessons learned. The rich imagery of water throughout the Bible helps us understand and articulate our faith. Just as water nourishes our bodies, so the scriptures on water nourish our souls. Exploring lessons while viewing the waters of the Mississippi River will enhance the imagery and experience.

All are welcome to participate in this 10 week study at the Hymes' home (1615 Elm Shore Drive) Please sign up in the fellowship hall and MaryKay will order books.

SAVE THE DATE! Vacation Bible School June 8-10th 9am-11:30 am. Snowball Mountain Challenge!
